

Identity Management Secure Access for Enterprise Assets

Challenge

In recent years identity management has become increasingly important, especially in the financial services, healthcare and government industries. Why identity management has emerged as a growing business and IT priority is no mystery. Obvious drivers take into account the requirement to protect one's intellectual property, data brand value and customer loyalty from the potential damage wrought by electronically-based fraud and theft; the desire to cut technical support costs, increase productivity through self-service and enable integration across disparate platforms. Less obvious reasons but equally important, include the challenges presented by changing environments such as mergers, outsourcing, federated systems and global infrastructures as well as industry and government regulations such as HIPAA, Sarbanes-Oxley and Gramm-Leach-Bliley acts.
